

Letter from the Director

The 2010 issue of the Journal of Texas Music History marks the tenth anniversary of the Center for Texas Music History. During the past decade, the Center has established a number of acclaimed educational programs focused on preserving and celebrating the unique musical heritage of the American Southwest. The Center has been recognized for its innovative work by such prestigious organizations as The Smithsonian Institution, PBS, National Public Radio, The Bob Bullock Texas State History Museum, The National Endowment for the Humanities, Billboard magazine, The Los Angeles Times, and others.

Through Texas State University's History Department, the Center offers a variety of graduate and undergraduate courses on Texas music history. In collaboration with Texas A&M University Press, the Center also produces the award-winning book series, the John and Robin Dickson Series in Texas Music. In addition, the Center is currently working with the Bullock Texas State History Museum to organize a major exhibit on Texas music scheduled to run from February to September 2012.

The Center's popular NPR series, This Week in Texas Music History, is now broadcast on NPR affiliate stations across the state. The Center continues to work with the Texas State Historical Association, the Texas Music Office (in the Office of the Governor), and others to produce a revised and updated edition of the popular Handbook of Texas Music, which is scheduled for publication in 2012. Texas State University students have researched and written hundreds of articles to be included in the Handbook.
