DEDICATION

To my best friend, partner, and rock, Oriol. I could not have persisted in this endeavor without your unwavering faith in me.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

First and foremost, I thank my thesis chair, Dr. Luis Intersimone, for his part in inspiring this project and for patiently guiding me through it. I am also indebted to my committee, Dr. Carlos Abreu-Mendoza and Dr. Alexandra Perkins, for their invaluable feedback and encouragement.

Additionally, I am grateful to The Graduate College, the Department of World Languages and Literatures, and the Spanish program at Texas State University for their generous financial support and for the opportunities afforded to me to advance in this field. I would like to extend these thanks also to all the faculty at Texas State with whom I have worked and who have helped me hone my research and writing abilities.

I want to take this opportunity to acknowledge my classmates in the master's program, whose camaraderie was indispensable to me. I thank them for giving me the occasional shoulder to lean on.

Finally, I thank my family for their love and support.
